RULES AND REGULATIONS

(a) Awarded applicants' obligation. One of the three-year awards will provide leadership in curriculum coordination of the Southeastern United States, including Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee. The other two awards will provide leadership for the Western area including American Samoa, Arizona, California, Guam, Hawaii, and Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands.

Each awardee will be the facilitator in enabling the States in their regional consortia to develop and maintain system (a) improve their curriculum services and capabilities; (b) establish and maintain a system of curriculum coordination in vocational and technical fields in conjunction with business and labor.

The Office of Education will entertain requests for proposals to support:

(1) Communication and coordination activities with the States, the Network, and the U.S. Office of Education.

(2) Travel costs and per diem for the Center personnel to attend two meetings annually of the National Network Council for Curriculum Coordination. One of these meetings will be held in Washington, D.C.

(3) Travel costs and per diem, excluding expenses, for State representatives to attend meetings sponsored by the center. Each of the six centers will hold a consortium meeting with their State representatives concurrently at a central U.S. location.

(b) Application review criteria. The criteria to be utilized in reviewing applications are listed below. These criteria are consistent with section 100.28, Bureau of Applications, in the Office of Education's General Provisions for Federal Grants, published in the Federal Register in 48 FR 30654 on November 6, 1973.

Components of the application must meet each criterion. Each criterion is weighted to show that the maximum scores given can be given to each specific criterion. Each criterion and the maximum points possible are as follows:

CRITERIA AND SCORE

(a) Need and problems—The application should clearly define the need for the project within the specified consortium of States and show an awareness of problems rather than symptoms. 15

(b) Objectives—The objectives should be clearly stated, supportive of defined needs, capable of being attained by the proposed procedures, and capable of being measured. 15

(c) Plan—The management plan should show functions to be performed and services to be provided, and the procedures for accomplishing these functions have been outlined. The plan and scope of the project is appropriate and is phased to the multi-year duration of the project. The proposed plan of operation is clear and the operational and financial objectives will be undertaken and accomplished. (b) how and when personnel and resources will be utilized and what in-service training connected with project services will be provided. (c) what feedback and evaluation procedures will be implemented and (d) how input from State vocational administration administrators will be utilized. 20

(d) Administration—The proposed outcomes should be identified and described in terms of (1) expected potential for their use for similar educational purposes and (2) anticipated local levels, and (3) relationships to Federal/National curriculum program. Provisions should be made for evaluating the results of the project including techniques or other outputs to the consortium States and the National Network. 20

(e) Institutional capability—Application should clearly set forth current curriculum strengths and the capability of the applicant to create and maintain liaison functions with consortium States. There should be evidence that adequate facilities and equipment will be provided and that participation funds (to include local support) have been authorized. Relationships with other dissemination, diffusion and publication systems should be identified. 10

(f) Personnel—The qualifications and experience of key staff should be appropriate for the project. Specific responsibilities and job descriptions should be identified for each of the key staff, and at least one key staff person should devote a minimum of 50% to full-time to the total objectives of the project. 10

(g) Budget—The estimated cost should be consistent with anticipated results and the geographic area, scope, and duration of the project. Where possible anticipated costs by budget category should be provided. The application should also include a statement of amount of cost-sharing which is substantiated by line items in the proposed budget. 5

The application review criteria are designed to ensure that each of the applicant's plans meets the following criteria:

1. The definition of "incomes in the 10112 conform to the one used by the Community Services Administration, that develops the "official poverty line." In designating that level, the

2. The definition of "income" in 10112 conforms to the one used by the Community Services Administration, that develops the "official poverty line." A chart showing the maximum income levels adopted by the Corporation is attached hereto.

Corporation recognizes that a substantial number of people who are unable to afford legal assistance will be rendered ineligible, but the Corporation's limited resources prevent adoption of a higher level at this time. After the Corporation reaches its preliminary goal of providing the equivalent of two lawyers for every 10,000 poor persons, as defined by the official measure, additional funds may be sought to permit adoption of an income standard that is more realistic in terms of the income required in order for a person to be able to afford legal assistance. It is also hoped that the development of knowledge about the fees charged for various legal services by the private Bar will contribute to a more informed determination of how much income is required to afford private assistance.

The "official" poverty measure attempts to define poverty in terms of the minimum income needed for subsistence. Critics of the measure argue that it is too low to reflect current subsistence requirements, and that a higher level than indicated by the official line. The recently published, Congressionally-mandated study, "The Measure of Poverty," describes some flaws in the current measure, but adhering to the Congressional directive,

RULES AND REGULATIONS

A maximum income level below 125% of the poverty line would disqualify the working poor, whose financial resources are only slightly greater than those of families entirely dependent on welfare. Of the maximum AFDC grant for a family of four, 140% of the maximum AFDC standard of need for a family of four, and 132% of the maximum AFDC grant for a family of two. As a matter of policy, the Corporation believes it would be a mistake to adopt a standard so low that it excluded all welfare recipients from receiving legal assistance.

The Corporation rejected a proposal that it set the maximum at 150% of the poverty line to accommodate areas with very low costs. Our research indicates that there are very few places in the United States where the cost of living is more than 25% above the national average. A random-sample poll of legal services programs conducted in August 1975 indicated that only a small number of them applied an eligibility standard greater than 125% of the poverty line. Adopting a national standard of this nature, or lower, would be seen as unjustifiable. It seems wiser to require them to apply for authority to adopt a higher standard on a program-by-program basis, as the regulation does.

The Corporation also rejected a suggestion that it adopt the Bureau of Labor Standard's "Lower Standard Budget" as the maximum standard. According to "The Measure of Poverty", there are numerous technical limitations in its methodology, and it was not intended to be a poverty standard. In autumn of 1974, the lower BLS budget for a family of four was more than 80% higher than the comparable poverty measure. In view of the Corporation's limited resources, adoption of the BLS standard is inconsistent with the statutory mandate to determine eligibility to those least able to afford legal assistance. Moreover, the BLS standard measures only 40 cities, and it provides no basis for extrapolating geographical variations in the cost of living into areas beyond the cities.

The "need standard" is the amount determined by a state to be necessary for subsistence, and is, in all states, greater than the maximum actually granted.

Section 1611.4(b) allows a recipient to provide legal assistance to a person whose income is above the established maximum if the person is seeking legal assistance to prevent the loss of benefits provided by a governmental program for the poor, as defined in § 1611.2. These cases traditionally have been a major part of the caseload of legal services programs. The private Bar is rarely willing to undertake them, because they require a high degree of familiarity with complex administrative regulations, and generally do not generate a fee for legal services. Individual reliance on such programs for subsistence usually have no discretionary income with which to pay for legal services.

Section 1611.4(c) allows a recipient to provide legal assistance to a person whose income exceeds the maximum if the person would be eligible but for the receipt of benefits from a governmental program, as defined in § 1611.2.

Comparison of the poverty line with current AFDC and SSI standards and grant levels shows that the poverty line is always above the AFDC standard of need in every state, and that in only three states—California, Colorado and Massachusetts—does the maximum SSI payment exceed 125% of the poverty line. In the other states, SSI recipients in areas with three standard above the poverty line. Recognizing that their own resources are limited, most programs have set their financial eligibility level below the poverty line, and they may be expected to continue doing so. Consequently, that only a few programs, located in localities with exceptionally high living costs, will adopt the maximum authorized by the regulation. Even a smaller number may request specific authority to set a standard above that level.

In allocating resources among legal services programs the Corporation uses a formula that takes into account, among other factors, the population of the area served at and below the official poverty line. For the area served by the program, and for the present the Corporation will continue to apply that standard even to programs that serve areas that lie above the poverty line. Knowing that choice of a higher maximum income level will not increase program resources, few programs are likely to choose an inappropriately high standard.

Authorized exceptions. A person whose income exceeds the maximum income level established by a recipient may not receive assistance unless the person comes within one of three exceptions described in § 1611.4.

The first exception, in § 1611.4(a), is made by the Act, that requires a recipient to determine individual eligibility on the basis of factors such as fixed debts, medical expenses, and other factors affecting a client's ability to pay for legal assistance. An individual whose income is above the maximum income level adopted by a recipient may be eligible for legal assistance after allowance is made for such factors.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

A policy of providing work incentives for welfare recipients.

An additional advantage of the provision is administrative simplicity, because it permits a recipient to avoid complicated income calculations if an applicant for legal assistance submits proof of residence in the government's income maintenance program. It would still be necessary, however, for a recipient to consider the individual factors listed in § 1611.5.

Determination of Eligibility. Section 1611.5(b) lists some of the personal factors that should be considered by a recipient in determining eligibility. The list is not exhaustive. Depending on local circumstances, a recipient may consider other factors that might either expand or narrow eligibility. For example, a recipient in a state like Alaska might consider the cost of transportation from a remote area to the nearest private law yer as a factor bearing on a client's ability to pay for private assistance. Another recipient might consider the value of a person's non-liquid assets as a factor rendering the person ineligible.

In determining a person's income, past earnings are irrelevant except insofar as they may have resulted in the acquisition of assets, that are required to be considered by § 1611.6(2) to be considered. Inquiry should be focused on present income, and on the prospects for its continuation. Thus, if a person is engaged in seasonal work such as farm labor, it should be recognized that the person's salary during the peak harvest is not an accurate indication of annual income. This requirement is established by § 1611.5(b)(1).

Federal and local taxes should be considered before determining whether to provide legal assistance to a person whose gross income is above the established maximum. Failure to do so would discriminate against working people, whose income is taxable, when the income of individuals on welfare is not. After taxes have been deducted, a working person whose gross income is above the maximum may actually have less discretionary money available for legal services than a welfare recipient.

A person who is aged or disabled may have unusual expenses associated with that condition (such as special housing, utility, transportation, dietary or medical needs), and allowance should be made for them in determining eligibility.

The disqualifying factor described in § 1611.5(d) is rendered by Section 1007 (a) (2) (B) (19) of the Act.

A group, corporation, or association may be afforded representation if the criteria of § 1611.5(d) are met. The legislative history of the Act makes it clear that Congress intended to permit recipients to aid such organizations, as they have in the past.

Manner of determining eligibility. Section 1611.7 requires a recipient to determine eligibility by means of a simple and dignified procedure that is appropriate to a law office and conducive to development of an effective attorney-client rela-

Children's Supplemental Security Income, Unemployment Compensation, and a state or county general assistance or home relief program.

"Governmental program for the poor" means any federal, state or local program that provides benefits of any kind to persons whose eligibility is determined on the basis of financial need.

"Income" means actual current annual total cash receipts before taxes of all persons who are resident members of, and contribute to, the support of a family unit.

"Total cash receipts" include money wages and salaries for any deductions, but do not include food or rent in lieu of wages. They include income from self-employment after deductions for business or farm expenses. They include regular payments from public assistance, social security, unemployment and workers' compensation, strike benefits from union funds, veterans benefits, training stipends, alimony, child support and military family allotments or other regular support from an absent family member or someone not living in the household; public or private employee pensions, and regular insurance or annuity payments; income from dividends, interest, rents, royalties, or from estates and trusts. They include money withdrawn from a bank, or received from sale of real or personal property, or from tax refunds, gifts, one-time insurance payments or compensation for injury; nor do they include non-cash benefits.

§ 1611.3 Maximum income level.

(a) Every recipient shall establish a maximum annual income level for persons to be eligible to receive legal assistance under the Act.

(b) Unless specifically authorized by the Corporation, a recipient shall not establish an annual income level that exceeds one hundred and twenty-five percent (125%) of the official pov- erty threshold as defined by the Office of Management and Budget.

(c) Before establishing its maximum income level, a recipient shall consider relevant factors including:

(1) Cost-of-living in the locality;

(2) The number of clients who can be served by the resources of the recipient;

(3) The population who would be eligible at and below alternative income levels; and

(4) The availability and cost of legal services provided by the private bar in the area.

(d) Unless authorized by § 1611.4, no person whose income exceeds the maximum annual income level established by a recipient shall be eligible for legal assistance under the Act.

(e) This Part does not prohibit a recipient from providing legal assistance to a client whose annual income exceeds the maximum income level established here, if the assistance provided the client... is supported by funds from a source other than the Corporation.

§ 1611.4 Authorized exceptions.

A person whose income exceeds the maximum income level established by a recipient may be provided legal assistance under the Act if:

(a) The person's circumstances require that eligibility should be allowed on the basis of one or more of the factors set forth in § 1611.5(b); or

(b) The person is receiving legal assistance to secure benefits provided by a governmental program for the poor, or

(c) The person would be eligible but for receipt of benefits from a governmental income maintenance program.

§ 1611.5 Determination of eligibility.

(a) The governing body of a recipient shall adopt guidelines, consistent with these regulations, for determining the eligibility of persons seeking legal assistance under the Act. At least once a year, these guidelines shall be reviewed and appropriate adjustments made.

(b) In addition to income, a recipient shall consider other relevant factors before determining whether a person is eligible for legal assistance. Factors considered shall include:

(1) Current income prospects, taking into account seasonal variations in income;

(2) Liquid net assets;

(3) Fixed debts and obligations, including federal and local taxes, and medical expenses;

(4) Transportation, and other expenses necessary for employment;

(5) Age or physical infirmity of resident family members;

(6) The cost of obtaining private legal representation with respect to the particular matter in which assistance is sought;

(7) The consequences for the individual if legal assistance is denied; and

(8) Other factors related to financial inability to afford legal assistance.

(c) Evidence of a prior administrative or judicial determination that a person's present lack of income results from refusal or unwillingness, without good cause, to seek or accept suitable employment, shall disqualify the person from receiving legal assistance under the Act. This paragraph does not bar provision of legal assistance to an otherwise eligible person who seeks representation in order to challenge the prior determination.

(d) A recipient may provide legal assistance to a group, corporation, or association if it:

(1) Is primarily composed of persons eligible for legal assistance under the Act, or

(2) Has as its primary purpose furtherance of the interests of persons in the community unable to afford legal assistance, or

(3) Provides information showing that it lacks, and has no practical means of obtaining, funds to retain private counsel.

§ 1611.6 Manner of determining eligibility.

(a) A recipient shall adopt a simple form and procedure to obtain information to determine eligibility in a manner that promotes the development of trust between attorney and client. The form and procedure shall be subject to approval by the Corporation, and the information obtained shall be preserved, in a manner that protects the identity of the client, for audit by the Corporation.

(b) If there is substantial reason to doubt the accuracy of the information, a recipient shall make appropriate inquiry to verify it, in a manner consistent with an attorney-client relationship.

(c) Information furnished to a recipient by a client to establish financial eligibility shall not be disclosed to any person who is not employed by the recipient in a manner that permits identification of the client, without, the express written consent of the client.

§ 1611.7 Change in circumstances.

If an eligible client becomes ineligible through a change in circumstances, a recipient shall discontinue representation if the change in circumstances is sufficiently likely to continue for the client's legal assistance, and the discontinuation is not inconsistent with the attorney's professional responsibilities.

The Legal Services Corporation was established pursuant to the Legal Services Corporation Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-385, 88 Stat. 378, 42 U.S.C. 2996-2996q ("the Act"). Section 1006(d) (5) of the Act, 42 U.S.C. 2996e(d) (5), requires class action litigation undertaken by a recipient to be approved by the project director in accordance with policies established by the governing board. Section 1007(a) (3), 42 U.S.C. 2996f(a) (3), requires the Corporation to insure that legal assistance is rendered in the most economical and effective manner, and Section 1007(a) (1), 42 U.S.C. 2996f(a) (1), requires the Corporation to protect against impairing the integrity of the adversary process.

On September 23, 1976 (41 FR 41722) a proposed regulation on class actions was published. Interested persons were given until October 26, 1976 to submit comments. All comments received were given full consideration. The following issues were among those considered before adoption of the final regulation.

COMMENT

Section 1006(d) (5) of the Act requires class action litigation undertaken by a recipient to be approved by the project director in accordance with established policies established by the governing board. The legislative history of the sections makes it clear that Congress did not intend to discourage use of class actions, but did want to insure that class action litigation would be undertaken according to standards established by persons accountable for the overall performance of the legal services program.

Neither the Act nor relevant American Bar Association Ethics Opinions permits a governing body to review class action litigation on a case-by-case basis. The governing board must establish a policy by which a governing body of broad policies that are consistent with its resource allocation priorities, and with the need to protect the rights of an individual client and similarly situated clients. The class action policy adopted by a governing body should not interfere with an attorney's independent judgment or duty to a client. See Sections 1006(a) (3); 1007(a) (3); ARE Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, Formal Opinion 334.

Because a class action may be a useful way of avoiding duplicative and repetitious actions, the mandate of Section 1007(a) (3) that legal assistance be rendered in "the most economical and effective" manner, as well as the prohibition in Section 1007(a) (1) against impairing the integrity of the adversary process, preclude a recipient from adopting policies.

(a) Shall not prohibit class action litigation when appropriate to provide effective representation to a client or a group of similarly situated clients;
(b) Shall not require case-by-case approval of class action litigation by the governing body;
(c) Shall give appropriate consideration to priorities in resource allocation adopted by the governing body, or required by the Act or Corporation regulations; and
(d) Shall not interfere with the professional responsibilities of an attorney to a client.

PART 1618—ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES

The Legal Services Corporation was established pursuant to the Legal Services Corporation Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-335, 88 Stat. 378, 42 U.S.C. 2996-2996d (“the Act”).

§ 1618.1 Purpose and regulations.

Section 1008(b)(2), 42 U.S.C. 2996(b)(2), requires recipients to insure compliance by their employees with the Act and Corporation rules, regulations, and guidelines.

On September 23, 1976 (41 FR 47753) a proposed regulation on enforcement procedures was published. Interested persons were given until October 26, 1976 to submit comments on the proposed regulation. All comments received were given full consideration. The following issues were among those considered before adoption of the final regulation.

COMMENT

Congress conferred upon the Corporation the dual responsibility of insuring compliance by recipients and their employees with the provisions of the Act and Corporation rules, regulations, and guidelines, and of insuring "the protection of the integrity of the adversary process from any impairment in furnishing legal assistance" to eligible clients. (Section 1007(a)(1)). The enforcement procedure established by this Part attempts to satisfy both these goals.

The Corporation's authority to enforce the Act is found in Sections 1008(b)(1) and 1007(d). The Act specifically mentions only termination of financial support to recipients as a means of general enforcement, but such a severe remedy probably would be unwarranted in most instances. It was necessary, therefore, to provide other methods of enforcement. Cf. Section 1008(b)(5), that does contemplate other remedies for violations of its provisions. The Congressional intent that the Corporation should have authority to create other remedies is specifically stated in the Conference Report:

To allow maximum latitude for informal resolution of violations, this Part does not specify what kind of remedial action, short of termination, should be taken when the Corporation finds a violation of the Act. It is anticipated that some initial violations may be due to uncertainty about the proper interpretation of the Act. In such instances, it should be sufficient to notify the recipient that its interpretation of the Act is erroneous. In other cases, the Corporation may instruct the recipient to remedy the matter according to its own procedures. It is expected that the Corporation will take formal action to remedy a violation only after other means have failed.

The procedure established by this Part is consistent with the Congressional intention that a recipient should have the responsibility of insuring that its employees comply with the Act. Section 1008(b)(3).

PRIMARY JURISDICTION

To insure uniform and consistent interpretation and application of the Act, every alleged violation should be dealt with in the manner prescribed by this Part. Use of this procedure will also protect the integrity of the adversary process by insuring that questions of compliance with the Act will arise in courts and not in lawsuits undertaken by attorneys employed by recipients. The most common situation in which a question of compliance arises is when an opposing party in a lawsuit challenges a client's eligibility for representation by a legal services attorney. Several courts confronted with that issue have held that it is not a proper one for judicial determination. Ingram v. Justice Court, 69 Cal. 2d 832, 447 P.2d 650 (1968); Budget Finance Plan, Inc. v. Staley, Civil No. GS 1924-85 (D.C. Ct. Gen. Sess., June 9, 1966); Florida ex rel T.J.M. v. Carlton, No. 75-245 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App., June, 1975) 9 Clearinghouse Rev. 209 (July, 1975); Bredenner v. Bredenner, (Penn. C.P. Luzerne Co., June 10, 1975) 9 Clearinghouse Rev. 214 (April, 1975). In Ingram and Bredenner, the courts specifically recognized the issue as being one for administrative resolution. In Carlton, the Court said:

No authorization, either state or federal, is necessary for a recipient's audit of its clients' eligibility for representation in a Florida Court by an attorney who is a member of the Florida Bar. In good conscience, it cannot be of interest to the client. Where the federal government makes legal services available under congressional authority, eligibility forrendering aid and services is a matter (to be resolved) by the federal agencies which make such services available. Bipin Opinion at 2-4.

The approach taken by these courts is consistent with the one adopted here, which assumes that the Corporation has primary jurisdiction to enforce compliance with the Act. The primary jurisdiction doctrine requires a party to exhaust all administrative remedies before seeking judicial resolution of a dispute subject to an agency's jurisdiction. The rationale for the doctrine supports its application to questions of compliance with the Legal Services Corporation Act. As explained by Professor Kenneth Davis, the doctrine is based on:

• * * recognition of the need for orderly and sensible coordination of the work of agencies and of courts. Whether the agency happens to be expert or not, a court should not act upon subject matter which is peculiarly within the agency's competence, except without taking into account what the agency has to offer, for otherwise parties who are subject to the agency's continuous regulation may become the victims of uncoordinated and conflicting requirements. 3 Davis Administrative Law § 1901, at 8 (Footnote omitted).

Where appropriate, the primary jurisdiction doctrine applies even in the absence of a specific statutory provision requiring it, as shown by the decision in Andrea v. Loundon, 307 F.2d 201 (2d. Cir. 1962) (Cite). Commenting on Andrea, Professor Davis said:

• * * perhaps the case stands for the broad proposition that establishment of federal administrative machinery to take care of a class of controversies indicates legis-
RULINGS AND REGULATIONS

The legislative history of the Legal Services Corporation Act supports the view that Congress intended the Corporation to have primary jurisdiction to enforce compliance with the Act. The original bill, S. 1813, 93rd Cong. 1st Sess. (May 15, 1973) and H.R. 7824, Id., contained a provision that would have given private citizens the right to seek enforcement of the Act in federal court. The provision was deleted, and in the Senate debates it was specifically noted by Senator Nelson that "Any violation of the bill's restrictions is to be enforced by the Corporation." 120 Cong. Rec 12923 (Daily Ed. July 18, 1974).

Support for application of the primary jurisdiction doctrine is found in the provisions of the Act itself. Section 1006(b)(1) gave the Corporation the authority, and Section 1006(d) gave it the obligation to enforce the Act. Moreover, the Act's restrictions are cast in terms that refer to the relation between the Corporation and a recipient. Section 1007(a) (2) requires the Corporation to "insure" that certain restrictions are observed, and Section 1007(b) prohibits certain use of "funds made available by the Corporation." Both provisions support the view that an alleged violation of the Act is, at least in the first instance, a matter to be resolved by the Corporation.

Part 1618 is added to read as follows:

§ 1618.1 Purpose.

In order to insure uniform and consistent interpretation and application of the Act, and to prevent a question of whether the Act has been violated from becoming an ancillary issue in any case undertaken by a recipient, this part establishes a systematic procedure for enforcing compliance with the Act.

§ 1618.2 Definition.

As used in this Part, "Act" means the Legal Services Corporation Act or the rules and regulations issued by the Corporation.

§ 1618.3 Complaints.

A complaint of a violation of the Act by a recipient or an employee may be made to the recipient, the State Advisory Council, or the Corporation.

§ 1618.4 Duties of Recipients.

A recipient shall-
(a) Advise employees of their responsibilities under the Act; and
(b) Establish procedures, consistent with the notice and hearing requirements of Section 1011 of the Act, for determining whether an employee has violated a prohibition of the Act; and shall establish a policy for determining the appropriate sanction to be imposed for violation, including:
(1) Administration
(a) Mandate if a violation is found to be minor and unintentional, or otherwise affected by mitigating circumstances;
(b) Suspension and termination of employment;
(2) Other sanctions
(a) Provisions for enforcement of the Act; but
(b) Before suspending or terminating the employment of any person for violating a prohibition of the Act, a recipient shall consult the Corporation to insure that its interpretation of the Act is consistent with Corporation policy.

§ 1618.5 Duties of the Corporation.

(a) Whenever there is reason to believe that a recipient or an employee may have violated the Act, or failed to comply with a term of its Corporation grant or contract, the Corporation shall investigate the matter promptly and attempt to resolve it by informal consultation.

(b) Whenever there is substantial reason to believe that a recipient has persistently or intentionally violated the Act or, after notice, has failed to take appropriate remedial or disciplinary action to insure compliance by its employees with the Act, and attempts at informal resolution have been unsuccessful, the Corporation may proceed to suspend or terminate financial support of the recipient pursuant to the procedures set forth in Part 1612, or may take other action to enforce compliance with the Act.

Effective date: December 23, 1976.

THOMAS ENGLICH, President,
Legal Services Corporation.

PART 1620—PRIORITIES IN ALLOCATION OF RESOURCES

The Legal Services Corporation ("the Corporation") was established pursuant to the Legal Services Corporation Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-388, 90 Stat. 2376, 29 U.S.C. 2998-2996i ("the Act"), for the purpose of providing financial support for legal assistance in non-criminal proceedings or matters to persons financially unable to afford legal assistance. Section 1007(a)(2) of the Act requires the Corporation to establish, inter alia, priorities to insure that persons least able to afford legal assistance are given preference in furnishing such assistance.

On June 11, 1976 (41 FR 23727) a proposed regulation on priorities was published as 1611.8 of the proposed regulation on accessibility. Interpreted persons were given until July 14, 1976 to submit comments on the proposed regulation. All comments received were given full consideration. The following issues were among those considered before adoption of the final regulation.

Comment

Section 1007(a)(2)(C) of the Act requires the Corporation to "establish priorities to insure that persons least able to afford legal assistance are given preference in furnishing such assistance." In one sense, it may be argued that the mandate of that Section would be fully satisfied by the Corporation's choice of a maximum income level close to the subsistence line, excluding those with higher incomes who also might be deemed "eligible clients" within the meaning of the statutory definition. But regardless of the maximum income level established, no legal services program will have sufficient resources to meet all the legal needs of the financially eligible population in the area it serves. Disciplinary Rule 7-106 of the ABA Code of Professional Responsibility prohibits lawyers from undertaking more cases than they can handle in a professional manner. Recognizing this, every program has found it necessary to control its case load, but few have done so in a rational way that insures that the most urgent needs of clients are met. As long as the program can control its case load, it will be necessary for programs to establish priorities in the provision of legal assistance.

In Formal Opinion 334 (August 10, 1975), the ABA Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility stated that:

A governing body of a legal services program may legitimately exercise control by establishing priorities as to the categories of clients served or as to the types of services to be undertaken. The subject matter priorities must be based on a consideration of the needs of the client community and the resources available to the program.

The procedure established by the proposed regulation follows the direction suggested by the ABA, and also harmonizes the statutory mandate to give preference to those least able to afford legal assistance with the suggestions made or implied following, Section 1007(a)(3), that requires the Corporation to "insure that grants and contracts are made so as to provide, in the most economical and effective delivery of legal services, the maximum assistance that the Corporation can provide to the client."

Section 1620.2 requires a recipient to enlist its clients, employees, and governing body in a focused inquiry designed to determine the community's most urgent legal needs, before establishing priorities. This approach is consistent with the one recommended by the Office of Management and Budget:

As in the case of medical treatment, the concept of "triage" must be applied—the relative need must be further defined in terms of resource availability and the distinction must be made among a Host of legal matters. We believe it is advisable for guidelines to be established which array the legal resources available and the worth (both social and economic) of the rights at issue. Only when resources are sufficient to meet all "needs" is the luxury of a policy which needs must be satisfied at a discount of a distinction pointless.
resources of the recipient, the size of the "nationally eligible population in the area viewed, the availability of another source of free or low-cost legal assistance in a particular category of cases or matters, the urgency of particular legal problems, and the general effect of the resolution of a particular category of cases or matters on persons least able to afford legal assistance in the community served.
