Broadband Technology Opportunities Program (BTOP)

The U.S. Congress has appropriated $4.7 billion to establish a Broadband Technology Opportunities Program for awards to eligible entities to develop and expand broadband services to unserved and underserved areas and improve access to broadband by public safety agencies. Of these funds, $250 million will be available for innovative programs that encourage sustainable adoption of broadband services; at least $200 million will be available to upgrade technology and capacity at public computing centers, including community colleges and public libraries; $10 million will be a transfer to the Office of Inspector General for the purposes of BTOP audits and oversight. Up to $350 million of the BTOP funding is designated for the development and maintenance of statewide broadband inventory maps.

Digital Natives

Using 15-24 year old's online behavior as a way to predict future telecommunications trends
(CapGemini White Paper, July 2008)

Changing Behavior - increase in the amount of time each week spent communicating (via online or cell phone)

- 1) Control
- 2) Impatience
- 3) Community interactions
- 4) Originality

Digital Natives

Harris Interactive and CTIA

The study was conducted online among a nationally representative sample of 2,089 teenagers across the U.S. who have cell phones (13-19). More than 100 questions were asked on mobile phone usage, attitudes, behaviors, and teens' desires and aspirations for the future including mobile communications and entertainment.

The study was conducted in July 2008 among teenagers who are part of the Harris Interactive Online Panel.

Digital Natives - results

- 46% use phone primarily to make and receive calls, and
- 39% use phone primarily to send and receive text messages
- 28% browse the web on their phone
- 72% can text blindfolded! (using keyboard)
- 38% somewhat agree, 19% strongly agree (57%) having a cell phone has improved the quality of their life

Net Generation, the 1980s, and the iGeneration, the 1990s

The Children of Cyberspace: Old Fogies by Their 20s, NYT 1/9/2010

Now in their 20s, those in the Net Generation, according to Dr. Rosen, spend two hours a day talking on the phone and still use e-mail frequently.

The iGeneration — conceivably their younger siblings — spends considerably more time texting than talking on the phone, pays less attention to television than the older group and tends to communicate more over instant-messenger networks.

Dr. Rosen said that the newest generations, unlike their older peers, will expect an instant response from everyone they communicate with, and won't have the patience for anything less.

Generational Multitasking

- 16- to 18-year-olds perform seven tasks, on average, in their free time — like texting on the phone, sending instant messages and checking Facebook while sitting in front of the television. People in their early 20s can handle only six. Those in their 30s perform about five and a half.

16-18	7 fun tasks
20's	6 fun tasks
30's	5.5 fun tasks

iPhone not secure enough for lawyers

- The November/December 2009 edition of Law Practice Magazine features the article “Parting the Curtains on the iPhone's Security Problems” co-authored by Sharon Nelson and John Simek. “Every law firm seems to have its share of Apple “fanboys” who evangelize about the endless virtues of every product that Apple unveils. But it’s time to slow down and think hard about lawyers’ migration to the iPhone — especially from the all-important stance of data security.”

Introducing 3L Tiffany D. Gibson, Pro Bono Law Clerk

GUEST POST by Tiffany D. Gibson

I was raised in a low socioeconomic background. Both of my parents are on Social Security Disability. My mother has been on SSD since I was in the 5th grade. My father has been on SSD since I was in the 12th grade. Our family has struggled even more since both of my parents are on disability. Getting through paying bills from month to month is a blessing for the household. Moreover, my parents have only a high school education,

A Virtual Law Office

Kimbro Legal Services is a virtual law office operated by Stephanie L. Kimbro, M.A., J.D., an attorney licensed to practice law in the state of North Carolina.

Kimbro Legal Services combines the professionalism of a brick & mortar law office with the customer services and efficiency of a secure online business. The virtual law office provides cost-effective and efficient, limited legal services pertaining to North Carolina Civil Law. Ms. Kimbro offers fixed fees, payment plans and personal and prompt attention when providing quality legal services online.

Is it secure?

This site is powered by Virtual Law Office Technology which provides the same protections that you get when you bank online. This is different from other attorney websites using "contact us" forms which operate using email. Email is not encrypted and any messages sent to an attorney through email will not be secure.

Primary communications are done through this website over Secure HTTP, which provides you with the highest industry standard protection available on the web. All payments are processed by Cardholder Information Security Program (CISP) compliant credit card processors, and no credit card or payment account numbers are stored on our servers.

Law Practice Management Section: eLawyering Task Force

What is eLawyering?

eLawyering is doing legal work - not just marketing - over the Web. Pioneering practitioners have found dramatic new ways to communicate and collaborate with clients and other lawyers, produce documents, settle disputes, interact with courts, and manage legal knowledge. eLawyering encompasses all the ways in which lawyers can do their work using the Web and associated technologies. Think of lawyering as a "verb" - interview, investigate, counsel, draft, advocate, analyze, negotiate, manage, .. - and there are corresponding Internet-based tools and technologies.

There are exciting initiatives underway now that deserve attention by all lawyers - present and future. While admittedly just a subset of the vast legal technology world, eLawyering and its lawyer-less analogs present fundamental challenges for our profession. There are great dangers, but also great opportunities for attorneys in the coming decade. To be successful in the coming era, lawyers will need to know how to practice over the Web, manage client relationships in cyberspace, and ethically offer "unbundled" services.

High Tech for Legal Aid --New ideas and examples?

- LPM eLawyering Task Force Discussion List on behalf of Jason Goitia

Technology can expand the circle of lawyers giving their talents to legal aid to include lawyers with disabilities. I met a clerk for the United States Supreme Court, at an ABA conference this summer, who is completely blind. Because of technology, it now costs about $600 to accommodate a lawyer who is completely blind. I have my own issues, and technology has enabled me to start my own practice, despite having issues that would normally hamper my ability to get a job (especially in this economy). Technology empowers people to contribute their talents to a wider set of people in a way that should be embraced by the legal community.

High Tech for Legal Aid --New ideas and examples?

The virtual law practice, Olea LLP, in Washington State is run by Katy Sheehan and Charlene Quincey. They are able to provide pro bono services through their practice and have been working with the ABA Military Justice Project and their local Washington Military Project to do this as well as providing other pro bono legal services online. Their site is here: <http://www.olealawyers.com>.

Tradition and Technology Meet Online

Social consciousness and a desire to make legal services more affordable are what led CUNY alums Charlene Quincey and Katy Sheehan to launch Olea LLP, a virtual law firm. while they share a common vision, their lives are far apart, with Quincey living in Toronto, Canada, and Sheehan in Washington State.

Here is a quick summary of my offer:

1. We will make the platform available to either legal aid organizations or pro bono attorneys at zero subscription cost.
2. When an attorney signs up for a free trial they get in the return email a link that leads to a client sign on page, and a link to their own Attorney Dash Board that manages the clients. The link is usually placed on the law firm's home page or a dedicated front-end web site that contains lots of legal information. Multiple lawyers can have access to the Attorney Work Space.
3. The integrated ecommerce component can be turned off through the Attorney Dash Board, so that all services provided through the portal are free.
4. The package would include all of our automated state specific document libraries. Here is a list of the document libraries that are included: <https://www.clientspace.com/dlcatalog.asp?siteid=3> Unfortunately our automated business documents are not relevant to this environment, unless you have pro bono attorneys who are helping small business units. Our divorce documents, name change, and estates documents are all up to date and excellent in terms of accuracy of content, (as well as ease of use). We have been charging our law firm clients a document usage fee for some value-added documents. This is essentially a small royalty per document. We would waive this fee for any legal aid or pro bono attorney.
5. An attorney or pro bono attorney upon sign up for the Free Trial should indicate in the law firm field on the sign up page that they are signing up under this category. I will set up within our online community a private discussion group for just legal aid and pro bono attorneys where there could be some interaction about how best to use this resource for the benefit of the legal services program.
6. The Free Trial concept incorporates on the client side, Rapidocs 4.0 ,which is purely browser-based, and works in both a MAC and Windows environment. All of our law firm clients are now being converted to R 4.

Thank you!
