PROCEDINGS

(2:03 p.m.)

CHAIRMAN LEVI: It's my privilege to call to order the meeting of the Institutional Advancement Committee of the Legal Services Corporation to kick off our 2016 Washington meeting of the Legal Services Corporation Board, which has been duly noticed in the Federal Register, and ask that we have a motion to approve the agenda.

MOTION

FATHER PIUS: So moved.

MR. KECKLER: Second.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: And then if we could have a motion to approve the minutes, we could do it as one.

MOTION

MS. REISKIN: So moved.

FATHER PIUS: Second.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: All in favor?

(A chorus of ayes.)

CHAIRMAN LEVI: And so now to give the development report. I will ask our director of institutional advancement, Wendy Rhein, to do that,
MS. RHEIN: Good afternoon. You have a development report on page 19 of the printed book. I'm sorry I don't know what page it's on in the electronic book, but it's on page 19.

We are edging closer to $5.2 million raised in private funds. This takes into account money that's been committed through March 14th. So there have been a few other gifts that have come in since, and you will see those in the next report that comes out. As you can see, the foundations and the law firms continue to be the driving force of the money that's raised, and that is likely to continue.

We have a couple of foundation projects that we're looking at for 2017, and we'll talk a little bit more about that in the closed session as well. And those will be the big focus of the work over the next couple of months, is applications and getting those things and then getting that money committed for 2017.

The Rural Summer Legal Corps, which is funded by the private funding, will go into effect this summer. There have been, so far, 28 programs of LSC's who have selected fellows. We've got a couple of programs that are still interviewing for the couple of fellows, but we will have about 32 fellows, maybe 31, depending if everyone gets placed, this summer.

And they'll be working a minimum of 300 hours in LSC rural programs around the country, so about eight to ten weeks, depending on the location and depending on when the student starts. The training for that initiative will start here in June, and Jim will speak to them as well as others, who will spend two days with the students getting them prepared to go work in civil legal assistance organizations.

John asked me also to report on another thing that I -- oh, sorry. Yes?

CHAIRMAN LEVI: I wanted to say, on the Rural Legal Corps, we have enough money to fund it for five summers. And we didn't want to start it without -- we didn't want to just start something and then have it drop off. And Equal Justice Works put a lot into it and the whole process of obtaining applications and outreach, and I'm sure there'll be more for next year.

But they have done a great job.
Yes, Julie?

MS. REISKIN: This is so exciting. Are we doing both process and outcome evaluation on this?

MS. RHEIN: Yes. There will be an evaluation that we built in from the beginning with Equal Justice Works to go through that with the students, both from a process perspective, but also so we can have quotes from the students and impact from both the programs and the students after the fact. Yes.

PRESIDENT SANDMAN: Julie, this is an advantage of partnering with Equal Justice Works to do this. They require, as a condition of all of their fellowships, that there be an evaluation done. So they've been down this road before.

Wendy, are you able to say anything on the spot about the geographic spread of the fellowships?

MS. RHEIN: They range from Hawaii to Maine. Truly. They're all over the country. The way the program is set up, the organizational main office does not have to be in a rural location. What we wanted was to be able to serve those that live in rural locations.

So in some places we'll have students where they may be headquartered in Lexington, Kentucky, for example, but they may be deployed into more rural locations. The students are working on assigned projects, so it's not as though they're -- the programs had to tell us in advance what they wanted the students to do.

And they're working on things like domestic violence, community education, networking with senior centers, for example, and doing some information-gathering, and actually being able to do some intake and some interviews, and a wide range of things.

CHAIRMAN LEVI:  Jeff?

MR. SCHANZ:  If appropriate, I would offer --

CHAIRMAN LEVI:  Can you come to the --

MR. SCHANZ:  Sorry. Yes. As part of this program, it's exciting, but I would like to be able to offer IG to have people, if you think it's appropriate. I also have done pro bono work, so it may be a good match.

MS. RHEIN:  Thank you.

CHAIRMAN LEVI:  Also, I think we have found, and it was way too late for this summer, but the cost of internship in the field is not a big deal for a big firm, something that is really within their means to say that they have created such an internship.

And we didn't think of this in breaking down the gifts early in this effort. But we've been able to obtain a couple recently from a firm that's actually saying that they'll support a rural legal fellowship, not in -- just give to the campaign.

So I think this is maybe a good thing to know,
and we'll have the summer, the stories from the summer, to also help us as we continue. Because the fact that we are certain for this summer doesn't mean we went have -- yes, Gloria?

PROFESSOR VALENCIA-WEBER: We did get a rural fellow in New Mexico, and there was a great deal of interest among our law students. And one of our law students was selected, a perfect fit, going to Southern New Mexico where much of the good crops come from, including that famous New Mexico hatch Chile.

And he's a kid who grew up in the hatch area in a farm family, had worked in rural projects before as an undergraduate, and is thoroughly bilingual. So just a perfect fit.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Thank you.

MS. RHEIN: And just one last thing. I wanted to let you all know I had an opportunity at the end of March to attend the Legal Services Funders Network, which is a group of California-based funders, mostly family foundations but they've expanded to corporate foundations and others, that don't have legal services as part of their traditional purview for funding.

But they have expanded their funding now, if they're interested in domestic violence or children in foster care or other things, to now wanting to incorporate funding for legal services in that. And this is a network that is only two years old, and they now have about 60 different organizations that are part of it.

So they have an annual meeting, and they invited me to attend the meeting in March. And they're really well-organized and very eager to begin looking at ways to fund legal services. As I said, some of them are specific to California, but others are regional and even funding nationwide.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: And why don't you tell everybody how that came about because it was a result of our -- anyway.

MS. RHEIN: Yes. So every time we have a board meeting in different cities around the country, I make a point of inviting foundations and foundation directors in whatever community we are in, as a way of getting to know LSC but also supporting the grantees as well so they have access to more information.

A woman from the Bigglesworth Family Foundation, we invited her in October. She attended, and since had a phone call with John and I, and then invited me to attend this meeting.

PRESIDENT SANDMAN: I'd just like to report on another development in this area. A week ago today I was on a panel at the annual meeting of the Council on Foundations, which is the umbrella organization for all the philanthropic foundations in the United States.

Mary McClymont, the president of the Public Welfare Foundation, put the panel together and got the conference organizers to approve it as a part of a focus on justice that they were having for their annual meeting. Most of the meeting was focused on criminal justice issues, but they did also have a component on civil justice issues.

And this was an opportunity for us to speak to a group of about 44 representatives of foundations from across the United States about why legal aid is a good investment for them.

MS. RHEIN: That's it. That's all.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Thank you. And I think this shows the importance of having this kind of outreach. And there are increasingly -- there are family foundations that are looking -- all across the country, actually -- that are looking for worthwhile projects to support. And so to the extent you come in touch with any, send them our way, anyway. Wendy will give them a good presentation.

FATHER PIUS: I've forgotten. How many are funded for the rural program?

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Thirty-two.

MS. RHEIN: There are 32 fellows.

FATHER PIUS: Thirty-two per year?
MS. RHEIN: This first year.

FATHER PIUS: This first year? Okay.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Yes.

Are you going to do the update on -- you want me to do it?

MS. RHEIN: Uh-huh.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: The Leaders Council is something which we discussed a number of meetings ago and created but did not actually get off the ground. We're about to get it off the ground because Harriet Miers and Ken Frazier have agreed, as we had all suggested, to co-chair this.

I have to say this is a very busy group of people. We've already gotten 30-plus folks -- nobody has said no. And this is a light ask. We're not asking them to do that much, maybe show up at a panel, maybe an op-ed. But stay informed. Learn more about us, and help us keep the doors open wider to more in not just the legal community.

And I would ask all of you to think about that because the leaders group -- I think of the 31 or 32 that have said yes so far, almost all of them are lawyers, but a couple are not. And I think that we need to have more non-lawyers.

This is one of -- for the next couple of years or so when we're in office, one of my themes is going to be this isn't just the concern of -- this shouldn't just be the concern of the legal community.

So think about that. Julie has had to put up with us for all these years, and she knows that the non-legal community, the non-lawyer community, has as much at stake in an orderly functioning justice system, accessible -- and so think about that. And then we can propose names and ask them.

I'm hoping that ultimately, the Leaders Council has at least one person from every state. It's just a largely honorific-type auxiliary. But it is -- Dick Thornburgh said yes in a minute, and -- so people are pleased to do it. And I think they do recognize what's at stake.

Anything more on that? Did I forget something?

MS. RHEIN: No. Just on a process issue. We have a Leadership Council nomination process that you all approved several meetings ago. I'm happy to recirculate that if you would like that. After this meeting we can send that out, and if you think of names, by all means just send them to me and we'll make sure that we get them on a list.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: That they go through the process like the last group.

MS. RHEIN: Yes. They go through a process. The Institutional Advancement Committee receives a bio of the individual, and the nomination person as well can say what they would like to. And then as long they're approved, then we'll go through the asking process and begin to do that.

MR. KORRELL: John, do we have short description of what this role is we should show somebody?

MS. RHEIN: Yes. Sure. We have basically a job description of what we're asking those to do. And I can send that out as well.

MR. KORRELL: That would be great. Sure.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Very amenable. But being informed is a good thing.
PROFESSOR VALENCIA-WEBER: Is that protocol that we should give you the name first before talking to the individual?

MS. RHEIN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Not only that, then, we have to have a bio, and we circulate it.

MS. RHEIN: Similar to the way that we've been approving prospects before we speak to them for potential -- to become potential donors, it's the same kind of thing, a bio of the individual shared with the board; and with the Institutional Advancement Committee's approval, then they're put into the pool of people to be asked.

MS. REISKIN: So I believe names were submitted a while ago.

MS. RHEIN: Yes.

MS. REISKIN: The names I gave you, would you let me know before you call them so that I can do an intro if you are going to call them?

MS. RHEIN: Yes.

MS. REISKIN: All right.
MS. RHEIN: Most likely, Julie, the ask could come from you, not even from -- I mean, we'll let you know as we're going through and vetting everyone. But the ask could come from you. John's done some of the asking. I've done some of the asking thus far.

MS. REISKIN: Okay. So when you're ready, if you get ready, you'll just tell me? Okay.

MS. RHEIN: Yes.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Public comment?

(No response.)

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Any other business? Anything we've forgotten today?

(No response.)

CHAIRMAN LEVI: Can we adjourn and move into the closed session?

MOTION

FATHER PIUS: So moved.

CHAIRMAN LEVI: All in favor?

(A chorus of ayes.)

(Whereupon, at 2:20 p.m., the committee was adjourned to closed session.)
